Green Dot Bioplastics CEO Presents at Plug and Play Innovation Summit in Topeka, KS

March 3, 2020

Green Dot Bioplastics, Inc. was featured during Silicon Valley-based Plug and Play's Innovation Summit, kicking off their partnership with Topeka, Kansas on March 3, 2020.

Saeed Amidi, CEO & Founder, Plug and Play, joined Topeka Mayor Michelle De La Isla and Matt Pivarnik, CEO of Greater Topeka Partnership, and 200 industry leaders, startups and investors at the day-long event titled "The Future of Animal Health and Ag Tech".

Amidi said the global company selected Topeka as the site of its latest startup incubator because of its location in the middle of the Midwest's Animal Health Corridor.

"As we need to feed more people, we need to have better productivity, better packaging, better product," Amidi told local news station WIBW. "We feel the only way you can do that is through innovation and technology."

Green Dot Bioplastics CEO Mark Remmert was invited to the Innovation Summit as a featured presenter. Remmert spoke as an example of the type of forward-thinking, successful, local high tech startup Plug and Play expects to generate from its accelerator program.
