

Green Dot Creates Bioplastic Identifier for Global Citizen Festival

Green Dot has created a wearable identifier for global citizens in advance of the 2015 Global Citizen Festival. This simple accessory can be worn for years, and when its useful life has ended, it can be returned to nature when placed in a composting environment.

Green Dot has created a wearable identifier for global citizens in advance of the 2015 Global Citizen Festival. Inspired by Chinese Feng Shui 'good luck' coin bracelets, this distinctive accessory was designed to raise awareness for Global Citizen which aims to create a lasting movement to end extreme poverty by the year 2030. The red 'O' charm is made with a biodegradable bioplastic formulated by Green Dot and is fastened with a waxed cotton cord. This simple accessory can be worn for years, and when its useful life has ended, it can be returned to nature when placed in a composting environment.

Green Dot CEO, Mark Remmert explained, "we wanted to create a piece to demonstrate that sustainability can be stylish. This simple, distinctive design will garner attention from across the street or around the world, but if disposed of properly, it won't linger in landfills for thousands of years."

At Green Dot, we believe that the world becomes a better place with each good choice made. That's why we're proud to be a supporting partner of the 2015 Global Citizen Festival.

About Green Dot Bioplastics: Green Dot serves the plastics industry and style-conscious consumers with a full line innovative bioplastic materials that can decrease our use of non-renewable resources, reduce the carbon footprint of products we use every day and, in many cases, return these products to nature at the end of their useful life. For more information, please visit www.GreenDotBioplastics.com.

ABOUT THE GLOBAL POVERTY PROJECT

The Global Poverty Project is a registered 501(c)(3) international non-profit organization whose mission is to end extreme poverty by 2030. The advocacy organization works in partnership with other NGOs, business leaders, world leaders and global citizens in its efforts to build the largest movement of people taking actions and calling on governments to support policies that would significantly impact the world's poor. The Global Poverty Project organizes massive global campaigns including Live Below the Line and the annual Global Citizen Festival as catalysts in this movement. Over the last four years, global citizens have nearly 3 million actions in the fight against extreme poverty. These actions have resulted in 87 commitments and policy announcements, including cash commitments valued at US $18.3 billion. The Global Poverty Project has offices in New York, Canada, UK and Australia. For more information, visit globalpovertyproject.org.
